Grinnell College is a private, four-year liberal arts college that provides a once-in-a-lifetime intellectual experience within an intentionally diverse community. Of the 1,700 students, 20 percent come from outside the United States and 25 percent are domestic students of color. Students pursue unique intellectual journeys because outside of the major, Grinnell requires only one course, the First-Year Tutorial. Faculty members lead students through the special demands of an individually advised curriculum. Nearly half the students pursue independent research or creative work with a faculty member. More than half of the students study off-campus. Global learning takes place on and off campus. Campus life is vibrant and all within walking distance, so the entertainment comes to the student and doesn’t require a commute. Each year, students choose how to spend more than $400,000 to bring performing artists to campus. One-third of students participate in 20 NCAA Division III sports and another third participate in intramural or club sports. Many students are involved in theatre, music, and studio art. Students also pursue a variety of social justice activities through student organizations, service learning projects, and internships. Grinnell is committed to making education accessible to those with demonstrated financial need.
